

How can you support your child's PYP experience?

1. Review our school's Programme of Inquiry and let us know if you have interest or expertise related to our written curriculum. We might be able to use you as a valuable resource during one of our units of inquiry.
2. Ask children about the theme, central idea, and concepts into which they are inquiring... show interest in their units of inquiry and plan activities around them whenever you can.
3. Encourage your children to “discover” them self rather than telling them the answers. This will foster lifelong self-efficacy that will benefit them both inside and outside of school and it will also improve your bond.
4. Bring the IB Learner Profile home by incorporating the language of the ten attributes. Discuss the attributes in regards to yourself and others, and encourage your child to reflect on which traits are their strongest and those which they need to enhance.
5. Foster independence in your child by supporting them with school projects and in problem-solving interactions with others, versus doing the work for them. This will give them the confidence needed to thrive and grow.
